Female & Chronic Diseases Office on Main street, four doors east of the American examinations of patients made free of charge.

Dr. Long examines and explains your disease without asking any questions. If he understands your case you know it, and you need not be deceived. If he cannot find your disease, and how you feel without asking questions he does not feel without asking questions to go by, and patients should not be satisfied with any other. This is the only direct and positive evidence of my ability as a scientific physician, and by this standard I am willing to be judged.

A proper diagnosis of local disease, without constitutional symptoms, that is not affecting the system generally, must depend upon the judgement of both patient and physician.

Give Dr. Long a call, and satisfy yourselves whether he understands your case sufficiently well to treat them successfully.
Dr. Long may be consulted in the German and English languages. Address letters,

SMILE WHEN EVER YOU CAN.

BY KATE CAMERON.

When things don't go to suit you,
And the world seems up side down, Don't waste your time in fretting, But drive away that frown;
Since life is full of perplexing, It is the wisest plan
To bear all trials bravely, And smile whenever you can.

Why should you dread to-morrow And thus spoil your to-day?
For when you borrow trouble You always have to pay;
It is a good old maxim, Which should be often preached; Don't cross the bridge before you Until the bridge is reached.

You might be spared much sighing, The thought that good and evil Are always here combined, There must be something wanting,
And though you roll in wealth,
You may miss from your pocket That precious jewel—Health!

And tho' you're strong and sturdy You may have an empty purse; (And earth has many trials Which I consider worse)
But whether joy or sorrow Fill up your mortal span, Twill make your pathway brighter To smile whenever you can!

YARN—THE ANT AND THE GRASSHOPPER.
BY JOSE MILLINGS.

Once on a previous time, about 400, 000 years ago, in the old of the moon, during a very dry spell of weather, just after a hard frost when grass butterflies were scarce, a white vane was evening star, an old ant who had lost all her front teeth, and was twisted with the rheumatism, sat in an easy chair, near the front door of an ant hill, superintending a phant kumkum of wheat, with the young ants were trying to get down cellar into their house.

Just then along came a loafing grasshopper, smoking a pipe, and singing, 'Begone dull care, I pray thee begone from me,' and spicing the old ant, giving orders to the young ants, he stopped to have a talk with her.

'Good morning, old mother Industry, good morning,' said the grasshopper.
'A fine kumkum of wheat, that you are tollin' us.'

'Have you heard the grate news?
'Dreadful sharp frost last night!
'Winter will soon set in I reckon?
'I heard the owls hoot last night!
'Terrible bad accident on the Harlem road yesterday.

'When do you think specie payments will be took up?
'There'll no pipe haz gone out, kumkum yulend me a match?
'How mummy ants have you got in yure village?
'Many sickness amongst them?
'I wonder if there is any truth in the dispatch that the ants down on San die creek have awl strick for higher wages?

'Who do you think yure ants will vote for, justuss of the peace?
'What is yure solid opinyon on the new license law, will it make rum any scarcer?
'Du yu buy yure grocery's av old Fergusson, I hope not, he is a mean old skinfitter, he sold me only last week a pee of bar soap for some bees-wax.
'The world is getting more full ov wussness every day!
'I wonder if there is enny truth in what evrybody sez about old square Benson, that he kumkum pay, only now and then sum ov his debs!
'Do you see much of the krikets now-a-days.
'I should really like tew know how they are getting along; rather tuf time for them I guess, yu don't think they will winter do yu?
'When duz the moon change now-a-days?
'Hev yu got any onion seed to spare, that yu kan rekommend?
'Dey yu think England will ever pay the Allabamer klams?
'I kan think what makes the cockraches so stuck up. I met one this morning, and before I could put two civil questions at him he wuz out ov sight.
'Sum folks are in such a swetting hurry.
'Ain't there sum good law agin spiders bldin their webs in the grass?
'How much wheat has yue ant got laid up; yu must have sum to spare.
'I wonder if it wuz up and rain before to-morrow?
'They tell me that maple sugar is a drug in the market, owing to its peculiar meanness; yu kant tell, kan you, whether this is so or not, I wish yu could.
'Mi opinyon now is that he who lives to see next year will see buckwheat a big crop.
'I overheard the older hens say, az I cum past naber Sherman's lower barn this morning, that eggs was gitting a good deal on plenty, and they must git tew work agin.
'Well, I am in an awful hurry; I am going down tew tend a jumping match between Springsteel and Steel-spring, two yung grasshoppers; this is te be the hop of the season.
'I must be going!
'I am unconform sorry I kant stay longer, and make yu a good visit!
'By the way, old mother Industry, I have got a profound sekret that I want to tell yu, buti wouldn't have it known by ennybody for awl the world, if it should git out it would ruin me!'

'Then keep the sekret yureself,' spoke the ant, 'it worth more to yu ennybody else.'

This is every word the bizzy old ant sed, but kept her eye all the time on the fat kumkum of wheat, and the loafing grasshopper moved off, whistling 'Sally cum up.'

REMARKS.
This is the way with awl loafers, if they kant steal yure time with idle questions, their last dodge is to steal yure credulity with an idle sekret.—N. Y. Weekly.

THE MORMON WIVES—HOW THEY REGARD THEIR PRESENT RE-LATIONS.

The Utah correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, writes under a late date:

The impression is general in the eastern states that the Mormon women, as a rule, do not appreciate the degradation of their position, and, if offered an opportunity, would gladly embrace it and free themselves from the embrace of polygamy at once. This idea is wholly erroneous. Doubtless, if each of the Mormon wives could ship of all her co-wives, and into alone in her husband's household, she would rejoice for polygamy at once; but the trouble is, that only one out of a house full, or several houses full, could do this, and the majority would certainly object to the change, on the principle that 'half a loaf is better than no bread.' It is possible that a very few Mormon wives might, if the opportunity was offered, leave Utah and seek an asylum elsewhere; but it would be very few in indeed, I assure you. It is not that the more refined and intelligent of them may not secretly repine at their lot, and long for a proper change, but that they have voluntarily shut themselves off from the chance of such a change in their condition. If the form of marriage into which they have entered into the so-called marriage relation of Mormonism in good faith, and from a conviction of the propriety of their course being right and proper, and they cannot, therefore be classed as common women, who have through weakness or willfulness, fallen from the paths of virtue, and entered deliberately upon a life of vice, they are still damned in a certain sense of the word, and effectually debared from the chance of entering upon lawful marriage with the Gentiles. There is no considerable demand for second hand wives in any part of the United States at present, and there is not likely to be any improvement in the market for years to come, at least. Even in the Pacific states marrying men are at a premium at this time. Most of them, too, have children who must be provided for, and to compel them to leave their husbands, and go forth helpless into the world, would be both unjust and impolitic. We need not legalize polygamy, but we can manifest a masterly inactivity, so far as the institution is concerned, and provide for a gradual extinguishment of the curse by indirect but more effectual measures.

THE FLAW HUNTERS.

There are people who have a preternatural faculty for detecting evil, or the appearance of evil, in every man's character. They have a fatal scent for carion. Their memory is like a museum. I once saw at a medical college, an illustrates all the hideous distortions and monstrous growths and revolving diseases by which humanity can be troubled or afflicted. They have wonderful knowledge of human nature. But it is a blunder to mistake the Newgate Calendar for a biographical dictionary.

A less offensive type or the same tendency leads some people to find apparent satisfaction in the discovery and proclamation of the slightest defects in the habits of good men, and the conduct of public institutions.
They cannot talk about the benefits conferred by a great hospital without lamenting some insignificant blot in its laws, and some trifling want of prudence in its management. Speaks to them about a man whose good works everybody is admiring, and they cool yore aloi by regretting that he is so young in his manner, or temper, or so smooth—that his temper is so lasty, or that he is so fond of applause. They seem to hold a brief, requiring of them to prove the impossibility of human perfection. They detect the slightest flaw in the pure gold of human goodness. That there are spots in the sun is, with them, something more than an observed fact—it takes rank with a priori and a necessary truth.

There are people who, if they bear an organ, find out at once, which are the poorest stops. If they listen to a great speaker, they remember nothing but some slip in the construction of a sentence, the consistency of a metaphor, or the evolutions of an argument. While their friends are admiring the wealth and beauty of a tree whose branches are weighed down with fruit, they have discovered a solitary bough, lost in the golden affluence, on which nothing is hanging.

Poor Hazlitt was sorely troubled with them in his time. "Littleless," he said, day evening was well attended by our business men, all of whom seemed to be greatly interested in the developing and building of another road through Massillon. Judge Walker presented many facts and figures showing it to be absolutely necessary for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to have a western connection.

At the conclusion of Judge Walker's speech, Judge Underhill, of Canton, and Mr. Clement Russell, of this place, addressed the meeting for a few minutes, favoring the new enterprise, and urging upon the city the necessity of making every effort to secure it.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new city prison, which is being built on the site of the old one, near the engine house. The stone work is nearly completed, and the building committee have notified builders and contractors that they are ready to receive bids for the brick and carpenter work.

Messrs. William and Henry Taylor have commenced the business of wire weaving, in their new building, near the depot. They will no doubt, have plenty to do, as this branch of industry is one which cannot fail to be in demand in this section of the country.

They were on their way to the fields to work, accompanied by their father and another brother named Jacob. George and his father were riding two horses which were hitched together ready for the plow, Jacob stepped ahead to open a gate and let the party pass through, and while doing so, a flash of lightning struck George killing him and his horse instantly, and passing on to the gate where Daniel was standing, killing him and his horse also.

Third Annual Reunions of Salem

Some of our church people of late have been seized with the spirit of the times, and are busily at work overhauling and making changes. At the Methodist church there has been a big improvement made in the Sabbath school room, the brick walls have been taken out, and folding doors put between it and the class rooms, so that they can be folded back into the corners, thus throwing it all into one large room, that the occupants of both can see a person talking to them from either apartment. The church is receiving a new coat of paint, and the interior is being frescoed by the skillful hands of Mons. Pajot, who has but few superiors in his profession.

At the Presbyterian church the work of improvement is also going on. We understand that the intention is to build a lecture room for the use of the Sunday school, weekly meetings, etc. The work of painting and improving the interior is now completed and presents a really fine appearance. There is nothing gaudy about the decorations on the walls or ceiling, but everything is neat and beautiful, showing good taste and judgment on the part of Messrs. Kemer & Kusin, of Cleveland, who executed the work in such an admirable manner that it cannot fail to give entire satisfaction to all concerned.

We hear it reported that this church will be re-opened on Sunday next, the 21st inst. The interior decorations of the St. Paul's German Lutheran church are nearly complete, ready for the pews and finishing touches. This church is located in the north part of the city, between Hill and East streets, and is one of the most desirable sites in the place for a building of this sort.
